

P. 140: Further Reading on Behaviour Management

Behaviour management is a complex and wide-ranging area of research. You will need to spend some time not only reading and considering the research, but trying out different approaches in the classroom. Below are some academic references to help you begin to get to grips with the literature in this field.

- Cooper, P. and Upton, G. (1991) 'Controlling the urge to control: an ecosystemic approach to behaviour in schools', Support for Learning, 6(1): 22–6.
- Head, G. (2007) Better Learning, Better Behaviour. Edinburgh: Dunedin Academic Press.
- Miller, A. (2003) Teachers, Parents and Classroom Behaviour: A Psychosocial Approach. Maidenhead: Open University Press.
- Norwich, B., Cooper, P. and Maras, P. (2002) 'Attentional and activity difficulties: findings from a national study', Support for Learning, 17(4): 182–6.
- O'Brien, T. (1998) Promoting Positive Behaviour, London: David Fulton.
- Slee, R. (1995) Changing Theories and Practices of Discipline. London: Falmer Press.
- Wearmouth, J. Richmond, R.C. Glynn, T. and Berryman, M. (2004) Understanding Pupil Behaviour in Schools: A Diversity of Approaches. London: David Fulton.