

14

The Potential of Qualitative Research: Eight Reminders

This is an edited transcript of a recent discussion about the nature of qualitative research in which a number of scholars respond to questions about their personal history with qualitative methods. As you will see, the participants take a rather different position to my own. I have included this article for that very reason.

Qualitative Inquiry, 14 (2): 254–84 (2008):
<http://qix.sagepub.com/cgi/reprint/14/2/254>

Talking and Thinking About Qualitative Research

Carolyn Ellis, University of South Florida; Arthur Bochner, University of South Florida; Norman Denzin, University of Illinois at Urbana–Champaign; Yvonna Lincoln, Texas A&M University; Janice Morse, University of Utah; Ronald Pelias, Southern Illinois University; Laurel Richardson, The Ohio State University

Key words: qualitative methods • personal narratives • autoethnography • performance studies • epiphanies • ethics in research • narrative • story-telling • personal history

EXERCISE

- List the points of difference and agreement in this article with what I say in Chapter 14.
- Which positions do you agree with? Why?